

Dear Sophomore,

“Sophomore Rangerette!” Doesn’t that sound great! Well, if you think that sounds good, try saying this: “Yes! I am a Rangerette officer!” PERFECT! Hopefully, trying out for an officer position is in your upcoming plans. And, if it is, I would like for you to take advantage of a seminar I have put together strictly for officer candidates for the 2004-2005 year. Over the past five years, the majority of the young ladies who have attended my seminars went on to wear the coveted white uniform. Two years ago, I also served as one of the judges during the interview and officer strut phases of the officer selection process. This seminar will better prepare you in three main areas of the officer selection process:

1. Interview savvy
2. Social graces
3. Proper attire

Being an officer is more than simply being a good dancer and leader; it is being a graceful, social role model. Please allow me to share with you my knowledge of what is to be expected of a Rangerette officer beyond her dance skills. My information is current and is endorsed by Ms. Dana Blair and Ms. Shelley Wayne.

All seminars are conducted by Cindi Somerville Rains in Henderson, Texas, just fifteen minutes from Kilgore College. This program offers the necessary essentials for expressing oneself through socially correct behavior; therefore, these are crucial, fundamental guidelines for any Rangerette officer candidate. It will not only build self-confidence but will also teach social skills that will lead to a more pleasurable and less stressful officer selection process. This is most definitely an opportunity you will want to take advantage of.
